MIESF Annual Report 2023/2024

Investment Update

The financial year ending 30 June 2024 finished on a positive note with share markets producing high double-digit returns ranging from 12.1% for Australian shares to 19.9% for international shares, whilst the US technology index, Nasdaq, was up over 50%. This helped MIESF deliver an overall net return of 6.0% for its MySuper product, however the major drawback to returns experienced by most superannuation funds was exposure to property, in particular, office buildings where property values fell by approximately -15% during the year. The high borrowing costs and office workers not returning to their offices has resulted in a second year of big falls to the value of property assets. MIESF is very pleased to advise that its High Growth product produced a net return of 12.9% for the year ending 30 June 2024.

The investment context*

The financial year continued the theme from the previous year of more volatility, interest rates remaining elevated but with added geopolitical risks in the middle east and no end in sight for the war in Ukraine. The key positive was of falling inflation around the world which gave rise to the prospect of cutting interest rates by central banks. The news and hype surrounding Artificial Intelligence (AI) continued with many technology companies share prices reaching all-time highs during the year. The stand out company was chip manufacturer, Nvidia whose AI chips were strongly in demand and commanding over $40k per chip for their most advanced AI chip. Nvidia's share price was up over 100% and reached a market capitalisation of over $3 trillion USD by mid-2024, making it one of the world's most valuable companies.

Whilst the war in Ukraine continues, the Israel-Palestinian crisis is creating additional volatility with the threat of a wider middle east conflict becoming very real. Despite this geopolitical risk, the share markets increased strongly as central banks were able to reduce inflation significantly over the last 12 months. US inflation is now 3.0%, down from 4.7% a year ago, and European inflation is down to 2.5% from 5.5% a year ago. In Australia, the inflation rate is 3.6% down from 6% a year ago. However, Australian inflation appears to be more 'sticky' which leaves the Reserve Bank with little room to cut rates and the possibility of increasing interest rates later in 2024. This will keep cost of living pressure up for many Australian households including higher energy costs and rising unemployment levels.

Whilst shares were the highlight for 2024, commercial property values continued their decline from the previous year with the Property Index posting a decline of -10.4% to 30 June 2024. The decline across Office buildings ranged from -10% to -20%, whilst Retail properties were marginally positive.

What did this mean for MIESF?

MIESF is pleased to advise that the 6.0% net return for the financial year ending 30 June 2024 for our MySuper product was achieved from a positive contribution from five out of the six asset classes we are invested in. This ranged from 4.9% cash, 7.2% fixed interest, 5.7% infrastructure, 11.3% Australian shares and 14.2% from international shares. Property returned -1.5%. More information is provided on page 10.

Our MySuper asset allocation is based on less risk with lower exposure to shares of 33% compared to peer MySuper products with an average exposure to shares of 52.5%*.

Our MySuper asset allocation has a much higher exposure to unlisted commercial property of 20% compared to 9% for many peer MySuper products and exposure to unlisted infrastructure of over 12% compared to 10% for many peer MySuper funds*. Our positioning has delivered solid gross returns for the financial year to 30 June 2024 (as shown in the asset class return table on page 10).

Our MySuper option remains conservatively positioned with the strategic asset allocation structured for an uncertain investment future, where protecting your balance is our key objective.

Our High Growth option, with 90% exposure to shares (both Australian and international) and 10% to fixed interest (both Australian and international), produced a 12.9% net return for the financial year to 30 June 2024. This option is suitable for those of you who are prepared to take on more risk, more volatility and have a long-term investment horizon.

Welcome to MIESF Secretary and Chair Message

We're very pleased to report that MIESF has delivered solid investment returns* for its MySuper, High Growth and Pension members, in a period where market volatility remained, geopolitical risks intensified and inflation fell around the world. US based AI related stocks drove the bulk of the returns in the share market whilst Office Property valuations were hit again for a second year in a row. Everyone in our team has worked hard to produce these investment results, as well as answer your queries and help you with your superannuation needs.

For the year to 30 June 2024, our MySuper option delivered a positive annual return of 6.0%, and for the 10 years, an average return of 7.3% p.a. which is above the average median return of 7.0% p.a. as measured in the SuperRatings® SRS0 Balanced Index Options to 30 June 2024 survey.

Returns for our High Growth Option, which has 90% invested in shares and 10% in fixed interest, produced a net return of 12.9% for the year to 30 June 2024. The High Growth Option continues to achieve its investment objectives and has produced an average return of 8.7% p.a. over the 10-year period to 30 June 2024.

Our Pension product, which is tax-free for our retired pensioners, generated an annual return of 6.6% to 30 June 2024 and an average return of 8.1% p.a. for the 10 years to 30 June 2024, ranking it in the top 6 highest performing pension products in Australia over the 10 years based on pension products surveyed by Retirement.

The big themes that dominated the year was falling inflation which put downwards pressure on interest rates and the development of AI technology with a handful of large US companies driving the returns significantly in 2024. One such company was Nvidia, makers of the processing chip used in AI development, its shares were up over 100% for the one year and Nvidia reached 3 trillion USD in market capitalisation. This is more than the entire Australian superannuation savings system. Together with other stocks like Microsoft, Apple and Facebook this has resulted in global shares achieving a 19.9% return whilst Australian shares returned 14.2% for the year ending 30 June 2024. Commercial property values however, remained under pressure, in particular office buildings where declines of 10% to 20% for the financial year were common.

MIESF's one year result of 6.0% for its MySuper product, which makes up approximately 95% of all our assets, is a good achievement and reinforces our belief that MIESF has been able to deliver solid long-term returns at low cost for more than 30 years.

*MIESF returns are net of investment related fees, costs and (where applicable) taxes but exclude administration fees and costs. Based on the Super Ratings Fund Creditting Rate Survey - SRS0 MySuper Index to 30 June 2024 with a Strategic Asset Allocation (SAA) of 60-76% growth assets as tracked by SuperRatings. Based on Retirement Retirement Default Option Index to 30 June 2024. Retirement does not review all pension products.

CEO Message

I am proud to report on a period of resilience, growth, and commitment to excellence.

Amidst a dynamic economic landscape, we have steadfastly pursued our mission to deliver strong, sustainable returns that support the long-term financial well-being of our members.

As you can read in our Secretary and Chair Message (overpage), this past year has presented both challenges and opportunities. Global economic conditions have been marked by volatility, with inflationary pressures, geopolitical tensions, and varying rates of economic recovery from the pandemic. Despite these headwinds, our investment strategy has proven robust. Through prudent management and strategic asset allocation, we have navigated market fluctuations effectively, ensuring our members' retirement savings continue to grow.

This year has also seen significant developments in the regulatory landscape. The introduction of new compliance requirements and policy changes underscores the importance of staying abreast of regulatory frameworks to protect and enhance member benefits. Our fund has proactively adapted to these regulatory changes, striving for full compliance while optimizing our operational processes.

Key regulatory changes included updates to the Your Future, Your Super (YFS) performance test and enhanced transparency measures. We have embraced these reforms, recognising their role in strengthening the superannuation system.

Our commitment to maintaining the highest standards of governance, transparency, and accountability remains unwavering. We are dedicated to ensuring our members are well-informed and benefit from a secure and efficiently managed fund.

Our members are at the heart of everything we do. Over the past year, we have enhanced our member services to ensure you receive the best possible support and guidance. Our site visits and educational material has been well-received, reflecting our ongoing commitment to empowering you with knowledge and confidence in your financial decisions. Looking ahead, we remain vigilant and adaptive to the evolving economic environment. Our strategic priorities include continuing to deliver competitive returns, enhancing member engagement, and reinforcing our leadership and voice in the industry. We are also exploring innovative investment opportunities that align with our values and offer potential for significant long-term growth.

As we continue to explore ways we can better support you, please know that if you need us, we are happy to help - as we have been for over 40 years! In closing, I would like to extend my heartfelt gratitude to our members, staff, the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union, our participating employers and all our partners for their unwavering support and trust. Morrison's of Glenrowan

"I loved how well Renae and Damien understood our brief and how quickly they were able to develop a user friendly website that we could easily update ourselves, along with a suite of associated collateral.

Following this positive experience I briefed in what I thought would be a really difficult piece of work – refreshing the brand for my family's winery business. This included sensitively handling an existing logo and moving away from a long standing and outdated label design.

I told GOSH the story of our family business and they interpreted this beautifully. They were able to deliver a well thought out package including a sharpened up logo, beautiful photography and a stunning website – and mum and dad are absolutely thrilled with their new brand."

FLYING FOX
Flying Fox 2019 Impact Report

2019 Impact Report

We are as motivated as ever to expand our programs to provide opportunities to those on our waiting list and beyond.

1. The Need

Why Flying Fox?

HERE'S WHY

Everyone deserves to have plenty of opportunity to make friends and have fun.

Flying Fox is a great place to be right now! Our buddies, staff, board and everyone in between have been working hard over the past year to provide incredible opportunities for young people with a disability to have fun and make friends. We've been readying ourselves for further growth and have been exploring all sorts of exciting opportunities. We're excited to share so much of the good stuff that's been going on within this report.

In amongst the good, we recognise that there remains an overwhelming need for programs like ours. Loneliness and social isolation are prevalent within the lives of so many young people with a disability. We receive feedback every day encouraging Flying Fox to grow to provide more regular social opportunities and to support our campers to get out and about, especially during difficult times like school holidays.

We have an extensive waiting list for two main reasons:

1. Flying Fox camps offer a unique and special experience. They're run by young people, peers and equals of our campers, who are relentless in their passion for inclusion as well as for fun.
2. Flying Fox has the drive and ability to provide an inclusive environment for campers with a wide-range of support needs, including those with multiple and complex disabilities who are regularly excluded from other programs.

We are as motivated as ever to expand our programs to provide opportunities to those on our waiting list and beyond.

In the meantime, we have done so much over the past year that is worthy of celebration. The many successful camps, our growing relationships with special schools and other partner organisations and, of course, our incredible 5th birthday party stand out as highlights. But what stands out most for me are the friendships that have developed between buddies and campers. Every day, Instagram is filled with photos of campers and buddies hanging out outside of camps, demonstrating that Flying Fox is playing an important role in creating those connections and breaking down barriers between people with a disability and mainstream society.

The past year has seen us grow in sophistication as an organisation, as well as in our reach and impact. We are incredibly grateful to our generous supporters, partners, staff, board, buddies and campers who are all so passionate about Flying Fox and who all play such important roles in making our organisation what it is today.

Thanks so much and have fun!

Introduction to Montessori in the Middle Years

Adolescents are in a crucial stage of development, emerging from childhood and preparing themselves for their adult roles. From a Montessori perspective, adolescence, much like the previous developmental planes of infancy and childhood, is a period marked by profound physical, intellectual and social transformations. These changes are governed by the distinct tendencies and dispositions that characterise this age group, driving the developmental milestones of the period.

The characteristics that manifest in the third plane, adolescence, can be intense. Educators play a pivotal role in understanding these characteristics and addressing the unique needs that arise during this time, removing obstacles to individual development and, second, by preparing an environment that meets the developmental needs of students of this age. Dr. Montessori believed that education is an aid to life and a preparation for it. During the adolescent years, Montessori students explore their place in human society and ways they might contribute to society. The work of the adolescent, according to prominent Montessori teacher trainers Camillo Grazzini and Balba Kruminis Grazzini, is to 'take an active part' both in 'society's productive labours' and in 'the regulation of its organisation'. Montessori environments for the third plane of development provide adolescents with opportunities for self-chosen, purposeful work aligned to manual and intellectual endeavours with social significance and an economic base.

In practice, this could involve integrating real-world experiences, promoting creative expression, and supporting entrepreneurial initiatives with intellectual research and studies in language, maths, humanities and sciences—all within a framework that respects the adolescent's need for autonomy and connection. By understanding and responding to the specific characteristics of this developmental plane, North Eastern Montessori will guide adolescents toward fulfilling their potential, preparing them not just for the next stage of their education, but for life itself. The aims of the Montessori adolescent program are to provide an educational environment that balances freedom, discipline and responsibility and nurtures the unique potential of each individual. The program enables students to:

- transform themselves into independent, self-regulating, resourceful and adaptable adults
- become interested and reflective observers, good listeners, thoughtful collaborators, critical thinkers and engaged citizens
- express their own opinions, develop their talents, make decisions and solve problems - independently or collaboratively - with confidence grounded in the practical, social and intellectual knowledge, skills and values cultivated in the Montessori adolescent community
- contribute meaningfully, with enthusiasm and integrity, to the adolescent community being formed, their school, family, and community life, as well as to the wider society, both nationally and globally.
- dedicate themselves to their future and the future of humanity
